Programme details

Part-B

1. Theme/Title of the Programme: RESEARCH AND ACADEMIC WRITING IN INDIAN LANGUAGES.
2. Type, Duration, Residential/Non-residential details: Workshop, 3 days, Non-Residential.
3. Concept Note (in 500-1000 words): India is a land of multi lingual and multi cultural society. So it is an incredible complex country having numerous languages and cultures and spoken language belong to several language families, i.e., Indo – European languages, Dravidian languages, Austroasiatic, Sino- Tibetan, Tai-Kadai etc. Though there are diversified languages yet they are not just for languages, they are the fountain-head of thought and culture of Indian civilization. Since time immemorial, languages have been the root of Indian knowledge systems. Indian languages with a large body of common vocabularies, common sentence patterns, common roots, common vowels and consonants and common underlying grammar have been one of the great unifying factor of the country. In India there were 22 languages of the Eight Schedule of the Constitution of India.

So far as research studies and academic writing of Indian Languages are concerned, such writings are very less in number. When we look into the reason behind such matter, it reveals that our Academician or Scholar have less expertise in writing research articles in Indian languages. Hence, the researchers find it difficult to articulate any research idea in Indian languages and they need more care and attention to enhance writing skills.

Therefore, this is expected to guide the researchers or participants in writing research papers properly as well as academic writings in Indian languages.

The faculty members and the research scholars of Indian languages and the other subjects belonging to humanities will also be able to participate in this workshop. We are really grateful to “BharatiyaBhasaSamiti” for giving us the opportunity to organise the workshop on the theme ‘Research and Academic Writing in Indian Languages’ which is a relevant theme for new NEP 2020.

4. Importance/Rationale (in 300-500 Words): The research activities allow one to have expertise knowledge on a topic of their choice, and the writing process helps one to remember what they have learned and thereby understand in depth. The fundamental purpose of academic research is to prove a theory and to develop it. Any type of research has several steps and the researcher will read later in the blog. The workshop is the best tool to develop or enhance knowledge and to facilitate learning. Knowledge is associated with research objectives and findings. Research allows comprehending specific issues through varied angles that were never identified or talked much. Research highlights the issues and it also leads to the personal growth of the students. This workshop will help the faculty members and the research scholars how to write quality research papers or articles in Indian languages like Sanskrit, Assamese etc. The workshops help to develop the skill of selecting a topic for peer- reviewed journals and journals of UGC care list.

During this workshop, the researchers will be benefited from the discussion about the protection of the article from plagiarism. This workshop would help in knowing the research methodology of Indian languages like Sanskrit, Assamese etc. and some writing formats like APA/ MLA etc. This workshop will help the faculty members to learn some of the tools of research for future guidance to the students.

5. Key Objectives (point-wise in bullets):

- This workshop explores the current trends of academic writing and publishing in India.
- Expertise in writing research articles in Indian Languages.
- Articulate any research idea in Indian languages.
- Guide properly to write research papers as well as academic writings in Indian languages
